Bloomberg	Four Mideast Conflicts to Watch as Islamic State War Winds Down "...Tensions between Israel and Hezbollah have been intensifying as the war in Syria winds down. Israeli leaders have said they won't tolerate a permanent Iranian presence in Syria, and have said all of Lebanon's infrastructure will be targeted, and not only Hezbollah's. Much has changed since the sides last battled 11 years ago. Hezbollah fighters are both exhausted and experienced from years of fighting in Syria, and armed with far more sophisticated and numerous weapons. For Israel, a new war with Hezbollah would mean confrontation on two fronts -- Lebanon and Syria, where the militant group has entrenched near Israeli lines. 'It may be that Hezbollah, which will now be left alone to take all the blame and all the responsibility for Lebanon's challenges, would be motivated to initiate a conflict with Israel sooner as a means of unifying Lebanese behind it,' said Daniel Shapiro, former U.S. ambassador to Israel and now a senior fellow at the Institute for National Security Studies in Tel Aviv.	DONNA ABU-NASR	Hezbollah
