Daily Mail	Two NFL stars pull out of organized Israel trip after pro-Palestinian activists say delegation is aimed at using them as propaganda tools Earlier this week, a news report indicated that 12 current and former NFL players were due to make a trip to Israel sanctioned by the government. When word of the trip was made public, a left-leaning magazine wrote an open letter signed by prominent activists urging the players not to go. Two of the players, Seattle Seahawks defensive end Michael Bennett and Miami Dolphins wide receiver Kenny Stills, responded that they would not be going. Bennett wrote a letter stating that he would go to Israel in the future as well as take trips to Palestinian areas, including the West Bank and Gaza Strip. For decades, Israel has been accused of human rights violations against the Palestinians after conquering territories in the 1967 Six-Day War	ARIEL ZILBER	Sports
Daily Mail	Trump edges away from moving Israel embassy to Jerusalem and stakes out middle ground on building new settlements – just as Netanyahu is primed for a visit President says he doesn't want to insult Israel, but building new settlements won't help achieve a lasting Middle East peace. He told DailyMail.com last year that Israel should 'keep moving forward' with settlements. But in an interview with the Israel Hayom newspaper, he took a far more cautious position. Trump is also backing away from Kellyanne Conway's December claim that moving the U.S. embassy in Israel to Jerusalem is a 'very big priority'.
